

A growing list of resources in different aspects of the conversation of sustainability in fiber and textiles. By no means comprehensive!

<https://www.newyorktextilelab.com>

- A design and consulting lab which has been integral in developing a regional fibershed for upstate NY and beyond. Gives exposure to local fiber producing farms and helps connect them to markets and designers. NY Textile Lab founder Laura Sansone has also been instrumental in helping farms to develop 'carbon farming.'

<https://fibershed.org>

- Based in California, Fibershed now helps to develop regional fiber systems that build healthy soil and protect our biosphere, across the country.

<https://ctfibershed.com>

- An affiliate of the California based Fibershed, but specifically focused in the state of Connecticut. Also promotes the use of natural dyes in products.

<https://www.thewoolchannel.com/about/>

- Founded by Clara Parkes, the Wool Channel advocates for and educates about wool, reconnecting us to this naturally insulating, biodegradable material.

<https://www.fairwear.org/about-us/get-to-know-fair-wear>

- Works with over 140 brands who are committed to finding fairer ways to make clothes. Transparency in supply chains and positive, safer working environments for factory workers.

<http://aboutorganiccotton.org/organic-certification/>

- Educates about the process of organic certification in the production and processing of cotton.

<https://www.thesustainablefashionforum.com>

- An online community which educates, empowers and inspires makers and consumers to reimagine the future of fashion by fostering conversation about the intersection of fashion and sustainability.

<https://www.wearablecollections.com>

- Collects unwanted clothing from over 31 greenmarkets throughout NYC, as well as in regional Universities in an effort to keep textile waste out of landfills. Surpassed the collection of 20,000,000 pounds of used, unwanted clothing in 16 years since its founding.

<https://fabscrap.org>

- Offers pick up and sorting of unwanted clothing by color and material for the purpose of offering recycled clothing for consumers. Offers sorted yardage, garments, notions and scraps for sale online and in warehouse.

<https://www.changetheworldbyhowyoushop.com/ethical-fabric-sources>

- Acts as a resource for sourcing ethically made notions, sustainable yarns, deadstock fabric and more
